it is our aesthetic obligation to take that seriously what is versus, what is vice versa, what has been turned inside out, and to combine it with diversity and unpredictability. However, this is only possible if one takes a basic position that is divided: the symbolic expression of the local and heterogeneous events in the global network makes it possible to use the network to strengthen local events, but at the same time to keep the option open to be able to do without it. It is the action and movement on the borderline that make this attitude possible.

Presentation and Art Education

Documentation and Theory

The central task of the esc media art laboratory is the production of art.

In this context the main focus is on the precise observation and seismographic recording of artistic processes that examine and deal with socio-political developments (information- and biotechnologies, socio-economic systems) and new technologies (hardware and software). The artistic activities of the esc mkl derive from the notion that art is understood as subsystem of social and societal reality; the media-specific approach is based on the designation of this reality through “new” culture technologies [“new media”].

Production and esclab

Not only does the esc media art laboratory have a specific function as place of coherent production, but it also distinguishes itself through the way this art production is facilitated. This specific approach developed from the networking concept of the esc media art laboratory is expressed in the esclab:

The esclab emerged from the encounter between artists, scientists and theoreticians from the most varied disciplines, which initially took place only as an exchange of ideas. The ensuing discourse was so promising, however, that on this basis over the years the esc media art laboratory developed a special form of cooperation which aims to use dynamic discussion and creation processes to directly influence the works that arise in this way. Each project is preceded by an esclab. In the course of this six-to-ten-month work phase, the project participants are invited to the esc media art lab to discuss possible synergies, spatial stagings, cooperation and the like. During this phase, the actual project emerges, which in this way remains open to decisive changes at each stage of the realization and implementation. The esc media art laboratory is programmatically oriented on artists' concepts and needs, and thus offers them the maximum freedom of decision-making.

According to the intention of the esc media art laboratory artistic works are not only facilitated over a short period but also mentored over longer periods. Transformations and developments are thus made accessible and find their real expression, which Friedrich Weltzien describes in this contribution to Momente im Prozess: Zeitlichkeit imkünstlerischen Schaffensprozess (2004): "[...] art as a factor that emerges in a process of a certain duration."

Not only does the esc media art laboratory offer Austrian artists the possibility of getting to know the works of international colleagues in an exhibition, but within the framework of the esclab it also specifically promotes cooperation between Austrian artists and artists from other countries, for example from Australia, Canada, Mexico, Chile, South Africa, the USA and from all over Europe.

In its productions and developments, the esc media art laboratory prefers the new, the untested and uncertain and it also contributes to bearing the risk.

In this way, in the esc media art laboratory, subjects are processed that are taken up only at a later date by a wider audience, by the sciences, media, art and cultural institutions. There are many examples of this: genetic engineering – “Lets make a Baby” 1998; patenting of knowledge – “I-Biology” 1999; surveillance/security – “Please Identify” 2002; construction of history and the role of the media in shaping the news (war reporting among other things) – “Terminal Time” 2003; genetically modified food – “Free Range Grain” 2004; feminism and migration „[prologue]“ 2005 to 2008; the question for the functionalizing of art – “Kunst!” (Art) 2008; the perception of time – “Time Inventors’ Kabinet” (Time Inventors’ Cabinet) 2011; cartographies and their presence and effects on our everyday life through satellites – “Unsichtbare Dinge” (Invisible Things).

Projects on questions of alternative social forms and life systems, the formation of communities and exchanging and sharing have always and repeatedly been launched very early: “1st International Pd~Convention” 2004, “Opportunity vs. Choice” 2006, “Eclectic Tech Carnival” (cooperation with Romania, Sweden and Turkey; contacts with Egypt and India) 2007, "Networked Cultures" 2009 (networked projects with a special emphasis on Europe), "acoustic field" 2010 (Austrian cooperation).

2013, "I share, therefore I am" - dealt with questions on the technologization of art. 2014, "The outside world of the inside world of the outside world" – was a reflection on the voluntary surrender of the private sphere, the virtual and the public sphere. In this year the project "Ministry of Hacking" was realized, which dealt with control and anonymity in the Internet. 2015, "Social Communities" - explored the conditions and possibilities for the formation of new collectives. 2016, "ZERSTÖREN/DESTROY" - focused on the dystopian events of the present and the loss of values and social achievements. 2017, "Nothing but Concentration": If all our forces and resources are used to deal with daily catastrophes and threats, no energies are free for ideas and new designs of societal models - "Nothing but Concentration" was a call and guide for a retreat and standstill from which new movements and visions can develop.

2018, "Distant Skies - Distant Worlds" - was based on the interweaving of nature and technology and opened up the utopian potential of the imaginary through fiction, fantasy and poetry: The future became an open space of possibilities. 2019, "<anders anders>" – directly links up with the creation of counter-worlds by investigating the utopian as the other, the unknown.

Productions developed in the esc media art laboratory have been and remain successful on an international level. Thus the international video-dance-media performance LocoMovere by Takako Suzuki, Pilot le Hot and Hanna Groninger – founded in 2003 – subsequently performed successfully in Berlin, Paris and St. Petersburg. In 2004, on the suggestion of the esc media art laboratory in Graz, the 1st International Pd~Convention was organized; since then it has taken place annually in cities such as Montreal, Weimar and São Paulo.

From 2005 to 2007, 137 artists from 35 nations (EU and Southeast Europe) worked on the [prologue] project in Graz to present and discuss new positions and strategies in art and theory in exhibitions, symposia and work labs. This project was continued in Berlin, Manchester, Rome, Istanbul and Skopje. Since 2009 the esc media art laboratory has been centrally involved in the construction of the first satellite developed by artists with technicians. In 2013 the LAC (Linux Audio Conference) took place for the first time in Graz, with installations on the subject being presented in the esc media art laboratory. The esc media art laboratory's MINISTRY OF HACKING project 2014 has attracted international interest: an invitation to participate in an international CF:NM network based in Scotland, resulting in an invitation to the Transmediale 2015; a feminist artists' group in Puebla, Mexico, worked on the next TransHackFeminist Meeting and has invited artists from the MINISTRY as well as esc media art laboratory to participate in Mexico in the summer 2015. 2016 this role is taken by the Montreal-based hackers group FemHack; here the esc media art laboratory participated remotely from Graz with an esclab. With the series ITERATIONS the close collaboration with the media art initiative Constant in Brussels has found its format. In 2015 ITERATIONEN found its first realization with "The Tech Oracle" as a collective installation of the participating artists; in 2016 it was realized in Brussels under the title "I don't know where this is going." in collaboration with the New Media Centre iMAL in Brussels. From this, esc medien kunst labor together with Constant, Brussels, Hangar, Barcelona and Dyne.org, Amsterdam, developed a four-year EU project from 2017-2020.

Cooperation and Networking

The esc media art laboratory provides space and is at the same time a platform for experiments and projects. It supports these through infrastructure and technical support just as much as through continued analysis and debate, and as early as at a stage when the direction and the dimension of a newly emerging project cannot yet be estimated. In this way the esc media art laboratory contributes to the public perception and communication of the subjects'/production's relevance. The main role of the art esc media art laboratory association is to provide artists with active support for their productions, which substantially distinguishes it from other event and representational spaces such as commercial galleries or institutional contexts such as museums or art houses.

The esc media art laboratory cooperates with individual artists, artists' groups and institutions from the field of art, culture and education. These range from the provision of space and /or infrastructure, via analytical discussions and feedback on application documents to the organizational and content-specific mentoring of projects. The esc media art laboratory thus makes an important contribution to realizing art projects by other groups, associations and institutions.

The fundamental networking concept of the esc media art laboratory is also expressed in the continuous discussion with international artists' collectives, such as with the Critical Art Ensemble (USA), the VNS Matrix (AUS) or the TransHackFeminism (MEX), Netzwerken, for example the Systemserver (INT) and Anarchaserver (INT) and festivals, i.a. Mutek (CAN), bodig (TUR), Hangar (ESP) and Pixel (NOR).

Presentation and Art Education

In parallel to the esclab, which facilitates new forms of art production, the development of new art education strategies is supported. Special formats are offered for various groups of visitors in order to take account of the specific nature of project-oriented action:

For each project there are workshops for artists, which are only accessible for the artists, and whose precise course and content is first agreed with the project participants. This facilitates the direct exchange of experience.

For teachers (university, university of applied sciences, upper secondary schools) and art educators, artists and/or producers design workshops specifically tailored for the project.

Long-term art education programs are offered for school students (such as pART, in the course of which two classes at an upper secondary commercial school were integrated all year round in the work of the esc media art laboratory for a period of eighteen months).

The aim of the general leadership program is to guide the audience from a mere consumption of art to the active examination and interaction with projects. This takes place through lectures, discussions with the artists, as participants in a work, as critics of projects, etc.

Since media-artistic projects are mostly ephemeral and after their spatial and temporal realization remain re-experiencable and understandable only in fragments or not at all, this genre of art in particular necessitates a theoretical accompaniment, a documentation of the whole event and a processing of the material to be archived.

A web archive has to be established in order to make the material freely accessible. Only in this way can long-term access to a project, its reviews and analysis be guaranteed.

Projects should be mentored over their whole length, from the first idea to the realization, by theoreticians who are also actively involved in the process of realization.

The artists' works are documented on film, photos and sound recordings. In addition, discussions are held with the artists involved in the projects in the form of interviews, which are available as videos on the esc website.

Lectures and texts by scientists and theoreticians as well as the material of the artistic discourse are provided online. Publication in the form of brochures, as series of writings and /or a catalogue is a useful addition to this web archive.

Cooperation

The esc media art laboratory has always been concerned to facilitate cooperation with other organizations and to support them. The form of the cooperation can be the common development and realization of a project, the provision of infrastructure and support in implementation, or simply providing a home for an event without content-specific participation.
